iddnt tellin the truth tht nt kr ha? plz tell me if u hav some info on it. Anony@May 15, 2007, 11:06 AM: Thank you for that info. I have been visiting that site for years. I will have to admit that I just went on a fact hunt today and came up with a story that seemed more plausible than what the account mentions. I have been on the site for years but I have never seen an account that says that the Bheem movies were based on the Ramayana. The only story I have ever read on the site is the Tantrulu. Anyway, I was just curious as to what was said on this site. Now I will have to go back and reread what I found out. I read your comment on the Tantrulu story, and I must say that I am convinced of it. I did not know that this story was already written on the site. It is a nice touch, even if it is for a different purpose.Q: How to mark the filename of the Azure Devops Release Pipeline? So I'm working on a release pipeline with visual studio enterprise 2019. My pipeline has quite a lot of steps: Building a Feature. Creating a new version from the solution. Publishing the new version to azure. Staging that version. Staging is the big question. The repository must be synced to Azure Artifacts. My problem is that in the last part, I'm not sure how I can get the file with the artifact to be the filename of the staging. My best guess is to check the Source or Build. Is there a way to get this file in Azure? A: In your release pipeline, you can use a copy activity to get the file out of the stage. You can then use the name of the file to name the staging. The overall objective of this research is to develop a novel subtype-specific agonist for the VLA4 receptor to be used as an anti-inflammatory agent. It is based on the findings that the major receptor for VCAM-1 (vascular cell adhesion molecule-1) on endothelial cells is the alpha4-integrin subunit and that a 12-mer peptide corresponding to the adhesive domain of VCAM-1 can selectively stimulate this subunit and can effectively inhibit leukocyte adhesion to
